Does Your Back Ache?

Bad Backs Bring Suffering to Many Norway Folks

Is that dull, constant backache making you old and miserable? Does your back throb and ache until it seems you just can't keep going? Do you suffer headaches, dizzy spells and urinary disorders; feel weak, tired and worn-out? Then look to your kidneys. Delay may mean serious kidney sickness! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's are recommended by Norway folks.

M. W. Sampson, Prop. boat transportation business, 19 Bridge St., Norway, says: "A cold settled on my kidneys and brought on attacks of backache. I was lame and unable to move any way, the boys didn't act right and I had dizzy spells. After using three boxes of Doan's Pills from Stone's Drug Store, the trouble left and I have been free from kidney disorder since."

Doan's Pills from Stone's Drug Store, 60c at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Oxford County Gems

Denmark's Amethyst and Mount Mica's Beanties Shown in Boston New England gems occupy a prominent place in the exhibits of the Boston Museum of Natural History, corner of Berkeley and Boylston Sts. Perhaps the stuffed animals, birds and specimens of sea dwellers have been more heard of by the public but the museum's geologist and mineralogical exhibits are exceptionally fine.

Those from Maine form probably the finest collection from the region to be found in any museum.

One glass case is devoted to local minerals from metropolitan Boston. One of the shelves has a variety of material from the excavations of the Boylston St. subway.

Middlesex County, Connecticut, has a large pegmatite area similar to that in Maine. The greater part of the specimens in the museum from the section come from Haddam and Portland. Many of them vary markedly from the varieties found in Maine. The tourmalines are more delicate in tint and offer show a wider range of color in the same crystal. The apatites are paler. The Haddam locality is no longer quarried.

However, in the Portland locality, Strick Quarry is actively worked, and feldspar is there obtained from pegmatite. Some gem tourmaline is found, in addition to the other minerals which are valuable as rare mineralogical specimens.

The Great Denmark Amethyst A number of New England pegmatites are shown with the fresh water clam shells in which they are formed, while from Denmark, Me., has come a large amethyst, the finest known specimen in the United States.

Cutting of Maine gems is an interesting chapter in the history of the industry. At first the rough material was sent to the professional lapidaries, but the results of their work were not always satisfactory to the owners. One of the owners of the Mt. Mica quarry decided to attempt cutting the stones himself. As he set to work he found difficulty in obtaining a machine to produce the results he wanted, and, therefore, designed and built a machine which is now almost universally used by the lapidaries.

The machine consists of the regular lap, or wheel, which is revolved by power, or by foot, and on which are put various abrasives for the different operations of cutting and polishing. Above the lap is another wheel which may be set in any position by the operator.

This wheel holds the small stick of wood on the end of which the stone to be cut is held by the wax. When one face has been ground, this wheel can be turned the desired number of degrees in the proper plane for cutting the second face, and so on until all the faces in the plane are cut. The wheel is then adjusted as to cut the faces in the next plane.

Mount Mica is Represented Three center cases show minerals from the Mt. Mica and Mt. Apatite, Maine regions. One contains tourmalines only.

The minerals most prized and sought for in these quarries. Various arrangements of the colors are found; in some the shades are graded gradually, in others the transition is abrupt.

There are other varieties of the minerals except quartz from Southern Maine. Among them are specimens of topaz, chrysotryl, scapolite, apatite, lepidolite, beryl and feldspar, as well as some of the rarer species. The beryls are the most striking group and some of the individual crystals show the form and various colorings of this beautiful mineral.

The variety known as "caesium beryl," also used as a gem, is represented by several exceptional specimens. The tourmalines are conspicuous on account of their depths of color and their crystal form. The second largest crystal of this mineral ever found in Maine is in the collection, according to the belief of the officials.

Opaque feldspar crystals are interesting. The mineral makes the working of the gem quarries possible at the present time. Feldspar without impurities is used in the manufacture of pottery, porcelain and vitreous enamels. There is always a ready market for it, so that quarries at Mt. Apatite, this product brings a profit to the quarry. All the quarries are situated in a broad band of pegmatite, composed chiefly of feldspar and quartz, but carrying tourmaline and other semiprecious stones.

Mount Mica's Historic Leadership Maine tourmaline deposits were first discovered at Mt. Mica in the town of Paris in 1820, but it was not until 1881 that a company was formed to quarry them systematically. Mt. Apatite in the town of Auburn was first exploited about 1868. Thomas Lamb, whose collection makes up a large part of the quarry's exhibit, quarried in Auburn and obtained years others have extensively quarried the deposits of feldspar with success. The tourmalines are obtained as a by-product.

Through the generosity of Miss Susan Minns there is also on view a collection of more than 300 cut and uncut stones. The purpose of the display is to show the fine precious and semi-precious stones found in New England. This gem collection is one of the most attractive in the museum and has aroused wide and popular interest.

"IF I WERE 21"

Health—I would underwrite good health by a balanced diet, observing the 15th amendment and taking five miles of oxygen each day on the hoof.

Play—I would find my recreation not in reading about games nor in watching them, but in playing them.

Work—I would choose some trade or profession in which my imagination would have freedom of action, and learn to love work for its own sake.

Mind—I would preserve the health of my mind by feeding it less newspaper and more history, biography and Bible.

Service—I would devote each day to something myself for some less fortunate individual, rather than pay some one else to do it.

Friendship—I would be more interested in being a friend than in having friends, and would take time to keep the fences of friendship in repair.

Humor—I would spend some time each day in the garden, humoring, smiling at the flowers and pulling out the weeds.

Patriotism—I would practice the virtue of patriotism in times of peace, as well as in days of war.

Home—I would make my home a place where a family, and deliberately plot to make home life sweeter, happier and more contented than it has been in other generations.

Beauty—I would begin each day by thinking of something beautiful, saying something beautiful and doing something beautiful, remembering that in life as in a mirror you never get more out than you can put in.

Mortality—I would build my life on the conviction that I am not a mortal body which has a spirit, but an immortal spirit which has a body, and take time each day to commune with God.

lake, just right for fishing, and boating around the shore, is Capt. Sampson's comment. Keeping the gates closed at the outlet when water is not actually needed is appreciated by a host of fishermen and camp owners.

GLEANNINGS

Keep your grip on life! Keep your heart in your work, and put vim in every outlet against obstacles.

The world makes room for anyone who comes boldly and aggressively into its ranks, who feels he has an honest work to do, and has failed to believe he will win despite every obstacle.

Put out of your mind all thought of failure. Every earnest, self-respecting man has a God-appointed work to do. No man can lead a respectable life in the world without work of some sort.

A man today is not the man God made, but a man who has made himself. We build daily, fashion our own lives, in a very real sense we make heaven or hell for ourselves.

We reap only that which we sow. Some men discover the fruits of their own sowing, refuse to look their own acts square in the face or see themselves with clear eyes. They blame luck, or fortune, or fate, which is indeed a very childish thing to do. The ultimate truth is that we make or mar ourselves; we are indeed masters of our own fates and fortunes.

When man truly believes he will succeed, success for him is almost inevitable. The power of speech was given to use, not to abuse. Better to be born dumb than to have the power of speech if it is used only in speaking spite, cutting, unloving, angry words. On every hand, some soul is hungry for kindly, sympathetic word, and remember, "home" is always the best "practice" ground.

BIRDS VERSUS CATS

It is generally conceded that the house cat is one of the greatest enemies of the bird life of the country.

Nearly all cats, if given an opportunity, will kill not only the mother bird but the young birds in the nest or on the ground. This great tragedy is as likely to occur in the remote places frequented by "wild" hunting house cats.

Owners of cats should, during the bird nesting season—May 15 to August 15—assume the responsibility of seeing that their cats are not given an opportunity to kill birds.

It is common knowledge that the success of our crops and the preservation of our forests depend largely upon the activities of insect eating birds.

It is believed that millions of these birds are killed every season by cats in the Northeastern States, including many thousands in Maine.

The Department of Inland Fisheries and Game of the State of Maine appeals personally to every person who owns a house cat to permit the cat to be kept in the house during the nesting period, as the success of a year's crop of birds depends largely upon their being free from molestation during this important period.

We have no control over weather conditions which effect the hatch of birds so unfortunately, but if everyone will try and look after house cats, bird life will be much safer.

Bird lovers are asked to see that house cats and "wild" hunting house cats are humanely killed.

Most of the dum junks in this world are about the birds and grooms.

DIGNITY KEYNOTE OF AMERICAN LIFE

Revolutionary Period Writings for Serene Beauty.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York city, in opening a new wing devoted exclusively to American interiors and American furnishings and architecture, has made a graphic contribution to the work of Americanization which is one of the pressing needs of the time.

A hastily judging world has chosen to regard American taste as representing everything that was tawdry and grotesque; it is apparent that the misconception arose from taking the manifestations of our crudest art as typical of national culture in the home.

More absurd than the domestic culture of the latter half of the Nineteenth century was probably ever known—the art of what-nots, hair-color furniture, Rogers groups, and lambrequins in architecture; and of mustache "hand-painted" cuspidors, and gold toilettricks in personal bair-brac.

It has been too widely accepted as representing the achievements of our civilization as the achievements of our Greek, Versailles to French, and the work of Christopher Wren to English.

The great truth brought out by the new American wing is that these groups represented merely a temporary slump, a phenomenon not peculiar to this country; the fact is that they were merely part and parcel of that Victorian commonplaceness and stupidity that was almost as marked in England as in the United States.

The one quality that was so constant in Americans of the colonial Revolutionary period and which is not apparent in their descendants was a kind of serene dignity. It appears in the vaineccotting of a Virginia home, in the delicate doorway of a New England "mansion," in the quiet beauty of a Gilbert Stuart canvas, in the lovely productions of the New Englanders.

Engelmann, Middle states cabinet-makers. It is the same trait that is uppermost in the lives and writings of the Revolutionary leaders—Jefferson, Madison, Washington, Franklin, Hamilton and the Adamses.

A dip into the life of Jefferson—with his Greek and Latin authors (in the original tongues) at his side, his taste for French novels, his statesman, his never-failing diary, his vegetables and plants, as well as the visits of European statesmen, writers and generals, his horseback wanderings amid his neighboring mountains, and all the other innumerable details of his life, a thoughtful country existence is needed properly to supply the personal side of the architectural and artistic setting which this great museum has so splendidly provided. Yet, even without these Americans can learn that their ancestors were dignified people, and it is a lesson well while in an age of automobiles, jazz and radio—World's Work.

Prisons De Luxe

There are no fewer than 61 prisons in France where there is one man under detention. The prisoner leads a life of comfort and comparative luxury. He does a few odd jobs for the head jailer and spends the rest of the day playing cards with the other jail-

How do we tell whether a baby is progressing normally? Every mother wants to know if he is above or below the average. It is interesting to determine the possible cause of his falling below the average.

Weight is used as one index of the progress of a baby. A good constant gain averaging four to eight ounces a week the first six months and two to four ounces the second six months indicates normal growth. On the average a baby doubles his weight at six months and triples it by the end of the first year. Many babies develop more rapidly than this, however, and if they are not overweight on admission to their height it is not undesirable.

The kind of muscle and fat is important, too. The flesh should feel firm and solid, not soft and flabby. The skin should be clear and have a rosy tinge. The muscles should be springy and respond quickly to stimuli. A well baby is alert with bright eyes and an intelligent expression.

The development of teeth indicates the nutritional condition of the child. A child who has no teeth by the end of the first year should have advice from a physician. The diet will usually be found to be lacking in the necessary elements for tooth foundation or improper quantity of food.

Rickets is one of the most common diseases of childhood. It stunts growth, causes deformities and raises the mortality from diseases such as measles and whooping cough. It is characterized by a deficiency of calcium in the bones, the exact cause of which is not known. It's symptoms are head sweating, restlessness, constipation, large, square, beaded ribs, curvature of long bones, curvature of the spine. It may be prevented by adequate diet having a correct balance of phosphorus, fat vitamins and the right kinds. Cod liver oil is used both as a means of prevention and as a cure. Deficiencies should have the care of an orthopedic surgeon.

The muscular, emotional and intellectual development of a child also indicates the normality of its growth. Ability to grasp play things, good coordination, learning to creep, walk and talk, recognition of objects and people, development of the emotions of fear, love, rage, contentment, all indicate growth. These have been observed in various children and a chart made to indicate the average time at which they appear.

The bulletin "Child Care and Child Welfare" contains excellent material on all of these points. It is published by the Children's Bureau and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Publications at Washington, D. C., for thirty-five cents.

The Department of Home Economics at the University would be glad to answer inquiries in regard to child care. Address: Department of Home Economics, University of Maine, Orono, Maine.

An auction will be held at the H. C. Smith house, South Waterford, May 29, at 1 o'clock, D. M. Stuart, auctioneer. See ad. in this issue.

GUARDING MEAT FROM THE HEAT

A few simple precautions for the housewife who does not want her supplies to spoil.

A few simple precautions will aid the housewife in keeping meat in best condition. It is, of course, common knowledge that the higher the temperature, the quicker meat will spoil, but the family's supplies are absolutely at the mercy of the thermometer. Ice and cleanliness are two great weapons of defense.

For many families a refrigerator is obviously out of the question, but it is perhaps better to have no refrigerator at all than a neglected one. Merely to wash it out occasionally does little good; it should be thoroughly scalded at frequent intervals, in particular the drain which is apt to harbor bacteria. This, if overlooked, may spread to the food. On one occasion a man applied to the Department of Agriculture and was told that a joint of beef placed in the refrigerator of this kind in a peculiar bright red. Upon examination it was ascertained that the meat was covered with a peculiar fungus growth due entirely to the condition of the refrigerator. In any event the meat must be carefully screened from flies. The danger of infection from these pests has been pointed out many times, but familiarity breeds contempt and they will persist. The fly not only does the meat itself no good but it may readily deposit upon it some infection, which is carried in turn by the fly to the human system. Some flies will deposit their eggs on the meat and these in a short time will become maggots and the meat is "fly-blown."

Much sickness that is popularly ascribed to "poisoning" or to bad food in general is really caused in some way by this, the food, in itself perfectly wholesome, acting merely as a mechanical carrier for the "germs" which cause the trouble. Some of these sorts come from the human intestine and their presence is a sure indication that filth is present, even if the amount is too small to be seen. Filth of this kind may be carried by dirt, but it more often comes from soiled hands. One might wish that every kitchen could have the sign found in some well-managed food factories—"When you leave the room for any purpose, wash your hands before you return."

"Germs" which grow in foods and cause illness grow very rapidly, particularly if the food is a little warm. If not destroyed unless the food is well cooked before serving. Simply "warming up" is not enough, as was found in a case reported after eating so-called creamed vegetables. Certain kinds of food—creamed chicken, or custard, or warm vegetables, for example—excellent culture mediums for bacteria, may have been warmed up into them by accident. For the reason it is a safe rule to have as short a time as possible to intervene between the cooking of the food and its consumption. Broth is another example. If it is intended to keep the meat for any length of time before serving. If the meat is to be served cold, it should be thoroughly first. All food, cooked or uncooked should be kept in a clean, cool place in order to reduce the danger of infection to a minimum.

On the average a baby doubles his weight at six months and triples it by the end of the first year. Many babies develop more rapidly than this, however, and if they are not overweight on admission to their height it is not undesirable.

The kind of muscle and fat is important, too. The flesh should feel firm and solid, not soft and flabby. The skin should be clear and have a rosy tinge. The muscles should be springy and respond quickly to stimuli. A well baby is alert with bright eyes and an intelligent expression.

The development of teeth indicates the nutritional condition of the child. A child who has no teeth by the end of the first year should have advice from a physician. The diet will usually be found to be lacking in the necessary elements for tooth foundation or improper quantity of food.

Rickets is one of the most common diseases of childhood. It stunts growth, causes deformities and raises the mortality from diseases such as measles and whooping cough. It is characterized by a deficiency of calcium in the bones, the exact cause of which is not known. It's symptoms are head sweating, restlessness, constipation, large, square, beaded ribs, curvature of long bones, curvature of the spine. It may be prevented by adequate diet having a correct balance of phosphorus, fat vitamins and the right kinds. Cod liver oil is used both as a means of prevention and as a cure. Deficiencies should have the care of an orthopedic surgeon.

The muscular, emotional and intellectual development of a child also indicates the normality of its growth. Ability to grasp play things, good coordination, learning to creep, walk and talk, recognition of objects and people, development of the emotions of fear, love, rage, contentment, all indicate growth. These have been observed in various children and a chart made to indicate the average time at which they appear.

The bulletin "Child Care and Child Welfare" contains excellent material on all of these points. It is published by the Children's Bureau and may be obtained from the Superintendent of Publications at Washington, D. C., for thirty-five cents.

The Department of Home Economics at the University would be glad to answer inquiries in regard to child care. Address: Department of Home Economics, University of Maine, Orono, Maine.

An auction will be held at the H. C. Smith house, South Waterford, May 29, at 1 o'clock, D. M. Stuart, auctioneer. See ad. in this issue.

OXFORD CLUB WOMEN MEET AT BETHEL

The annual meeting of the Oxford Literary Union was held at Bethel Inn, Bethel, Tuesday.

Over 30 Oxford County women attended the annual luncheon. The hour before luncheon was given over to greeting and settling acquainted. Mrs. J. S. Sturtevant of Dixfield, who has been the president of this union ever since it was formed under her initiative, was almost the first to arrive and the last to leave.

Bethel Inn is an ideal place for such gathering and it is here that the annual meeting always is held.

The roadway was lined with automobiles and there was an air of festivity abroad.

The dining room was filled with club women at the luncheon hour.

CASCO

Pomona Grange

Cumberland and Androscoggin Pomona Grange met with Naples Grange, Tuesday, May 19, with a large attendance. The Grange was opened in form by the Master, Gardner Cole.

After the silent salute to the flag with only a soft accompaniment of the "Star Spangled Banner" by Mrs. Gardner Cole, the reports from Granges were given by Carl Kilbourn, Master of Cumberland and Oxford Pomona; B. F. Jordan, Casco Grange; Jessie Keene of Lake Grange, Poland and Gardner Cole of Riverside Grange, Raymond. Then followed a song, "Years of Peace," by the Grange chorus.

The question, "Can a man who believes in the principles of Christianity serve his country better by going or refusing to go to war?" This was eloquently introduced by Rev. Fred Lyman and Mark Leach in the affirmative and refuted by Gardner Cole and E. Wilson Baker while Frank Jordan and Irving Barker touched on the subject again at the afternoon session. After a dinner long to be remembered as a good one, the following program was given: Song by Grange choir, "Prayer for Peace," then a dramatized delineation of characters in the "Ruggleses" by Kate Douglas Wiggin was given by the school children through the instrumentality and drill of Mrs. Brown of the Agricultural Department, gave an illustrated bird lecture in colors and also a short talk on importance of buying certified seed, particularly tested potatoes. This was very instructive. Songs, "The Bright May Morning" and "Spring Song" were beautifully rendered by Allen and Dorothy Barker, assisted by their teacher, Miss Ida Elden. The visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kilbourn and Mrs. Nellie Bryant of South Bridgton.

The next meeting will be held at East Raymond, Tuesday, June 9, with an address by Harrie E. Coe of Portland. This being State of Maine Day, a large attendance is desired.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her from Sickness to Health

Ellensburg, Washington. — "When I was first coming into womanhood I suffered terribly every month. My mother did everything she could think of, so she took me to several doctors and they only helped me a little. Mother was talking to another lady about my condition and she told mother of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mother got me six bottles and at the end of the first month I was much better, so I kept on taking it until I had no more pains. When I got married and had my first child I was in terrible pain so that it was impossible for me to do my housework. I thought of how the Vegetable Compound had helped me so much before, so I bought a bottle and at the end of the first month I was much better, so I kept on taking it until I had no more pains. HISTORY OF THE ADOPTION OF THE POPPY BY THE AMERICAN LEGION AND THE AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

It was not by chance that the poppy was chosen as the Memorial Flower of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary, the poppy sprang from the hearts of these two great organizations.

The idea of wearing the poppy in remembrance of all who died in the World War was presented to the American Legion by one who, from all information obtainable, was the first in America to thus wear the poppy, Miss Moina Michael, of Athens, Georgia. The greater part of the following was taken from her history of its adoption.

It was on the morning of November 6, 1915, while she was serving on the staff of the Y. M. C. A. Overseas Headquarters at Hamilton Hall, Columbia University, New York, that a soldier placed in the hands of Miss Moina Michael a copy of the Ladies' Home Journal with Col. John McCrae's "We Shall Not Sleep," illustrated in it:

"In Flanders Fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place, and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly—
Scarce heard among the guns below.
WE ARE THE DEAD. Short days ago
We lived, we loved, we saw the dawn
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
IN FLANDERS FIELDS.

Take us out of our graves with the foe,
To you from falling hands we throw
THE FIGHT. Be yours to hold it high!
If we break faith with you who die,
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
IN FLANDERS FIELDS.

Alone in her office Miss Michael read and re-read this beautiful verse which immortalized the poppy, and studied the graphic illustration. She caught the message, and as she had dedicated herself to the service of her country on the night war was declared, she at this time made a second dedication, to keep the Faith and always wear a poppy in Flanders Fields as a sign of remembrance of the sacrifices made by those who fell. She wrote this dedication in verse, considered by many to be the most beautiful answer ever written.

"Oh, you who sleep in Flanders Fields
Sleep sweet—to rise anew
We caught the torch you threw
And holding high, we keep the Faith
With all who die.

We cherish, too, the poppy red
That grows in fields where valor led,
It seems to signal to the red
Of the flowers that bloom above the dead
In Flanders Fields.

And now the Torch and Poppy red
We wear in honor of our dead
We've learned the lesson that you taught
We've learned the lesson that you taught
In Flanders Fields.

It was the penning of the last line of this dedication, a committee from the 25th Conference of the Y. M. C. A. which was meeting there at that time, brought her a check for $10.00 in appreciation of her efforts to make an attractive Hostess House in their Headquarters. She had before this time furnished the flowers from her own purse. "How strange," she replied, "and I shall buy bright red poppies, Flanders Field poppies, do you know why?" and she showed the men the poem and her answer. They were so impressed that they asked the privilege of presenting the idea to the 25th Conference.

The Conference also was impressed, and that afternoon, Miss Michael bought silk poppies, and after the adjournment of the Conference of the Y. M. C. A. she came down stairs and asked for poppies to wear, the first scene in America of wearing the poppy for all who died.

It was in 1920 that Dr. Pender Jensen of Tacoma, Washington, went back over to search for his father's grave in the cemetery of France. He was so impressed by the crimson waving masses that upon his return he had his Legion Post adopt the poppy as its Memorial flower.

Miss Michael was year after year increasingly impressed by the need of a token, "Let us forget." Her vision was far reaching, she realized we could not have beautiful memorials in every corner of the land from whence our heroes came, but the poppy could be worn as a memorial everywhere.

The resolution was presented by the Georgia Department at the National Convention held in Cleveland, September 27-29, 1920, and the poppy was adopted as the Memorial flower of the American Legion, its first adoption by a National Organization.

At its organizing Convention in Kansas City, October, 1921, the American Legion Auxiliary adopted the poppy as its Memorial flower, and pledged the profits 100 per cent. to welfare for the service men and women and their families.

The poppy is now the Memorial flower of the French, British, and Canadian World War Veterans organizations. The American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary cannot be copyrighted, and but the American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary can always claim to have been the first large national organizations of this country to have adopted this flower.

Buy Me—I stand for service. I enabled one cent to be earned by a disinterested service man in the hospital who needed it, and all you pay for me goes 100 per cent. to service for those for whom the war is not yet over. Buy Me!

Wear Me—I represent the sacrifice of the men who fell in Flanders Fields. I am a Memorial which died in service. In reverence and understanding, Wear Me!

BATES—WEST PARIS

Annual Convention

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Oxford County held their annual convention here Thursday, May 21, in the Universalist church. This is a one day session. Mrs. Susie E. Chapman of South Paris is the presiding officer. (The State President, Mrs. Althea C. Quimby, is to be here all day and the speaker in the evening, Rev. Helen H. Carlson will speak to the children in the afternoon when they come from school. There will be special music both afternoon and evening.)

The Parent-Teachers' Association held their last meeting for the year last Monday evening, May 11, at the schoolhouse. The speaker, who was expected, disappointed them at the last minute, therefore an impromptu program was put on after the business was disposed of which consisted of readings by A. T. Hollis, Mrs. Carrie Flavin and Prin. Libby. The hot lunch committee reported that all the hot lunch bill had been paid and there was a small amount left over. The committee on lunch room equipment reported that the furniture, tables, cupboards, etc., were done, the dishes, etc., ordered so that at the beginning of another school year the school kitchen and lunch room will be ready to use and enjoy. A need of simple amusements in the way of swings, etc., was suggested by the principal for the children's side of the playgrounds. A teeter totter or see-saw has already been put in which is much enjoyed at recess times. This is the last meeting for the school year. The next will be held the second Monday in October.

Plans are being formed in regard to Memorial Day. The local committee are to be assisted by the Hannah Carter D. of V. Tent.

Developing Oxford County

Agricultural Lime Might be Produced at Home for the Farmers

Editor, Norway Advertiser. I have had so much space in the Advertiser of late that it hardly seems as if more publicity should be given to me. Perhaps the topic of this letter will get by the editor's restrictive hand, however.

One week the Advertiser publishes an article about the need of more lime to spread on the farms, and recommends a low grade of lime for that purpose. The next week, the Advertiser runs an article headed "Developing Oxford County." Why not develop the county by establishing a new industry, the local production of agricultural lime?

There are deposits of lime rock in various parts of the county. One which I have examined in Buckfield around Basin Falls, less than two miles northwest of the village. I am told that similar deposits exist in the vicinity of Albany Basins in Albany, Kezar Falls in Lovell, the ice caves in Greenwood, and Screwwager Falls in Newry. Not being a geologist, I will not attempt to express any opinion as to the size or quality of any of those. Probably there are others.

It may be that one or several of them are of sufficient extent and usable quality to warrant development on a small scale, such as would fill local needs for agricultural lime. At any rate, they ought to be worth an inspection with that object in view.

An attempt of this kind was made about two years ago at Atkinson in Piscataquis County. Of course its success depended on three features—quality of lime, amount of lime, business management. I do not know the results of it, but do believe that the promoters had a fundamentally sound idea. It would be a big thing indeed, if one of the lime deposits in Oxford County should prove suitable for masonry purposes. That would be extra luck if one should find it—D. Cromett Clark.

East, west, north and south, all over Maine and New Hampshire, people are taking Karnak, the remarkable new medicine that is being sold here.

Statements like the following, from Mr. John Cornelius, 121 Central St., Manchester, N. H., are being made everywhere:

"Yes, sir, Karnak has rid me of my troubles and put me in such fine shape that I actually feel like it has turned back the calendar ten years for me," says Mr. Cornelius.

"Stomach trouble had gotten me into mighty bad condition, and my digestion was so poor that everything I ate seemed to lie like a heavy lump in the pit of my stomach. It would cause such terrible pain and bloating that I could hardly get my breath at times, and I was in such a weak condition that many a day I went to work when I should have been at home.

"It was the best investment I ever made when I got Karnak. The first dose seemed to soothe my stomach and drive away the gas, and since taking three bottles I don't feel a sign of indigestion at all. The gas that used to just roll up and down in my stomach has completely disappeared, and this in itself is a relief that just seems almost too good to be true. I feel fine all over."

Karnak is sold in Norway exclusively by Frank P. Stone, and by the leading druggist in every town.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

A million dollars was spent last year in advertising coffee.
A lot of money, but it reaped a harvest, for the average per capita consumption of coffee was increased eighty cups a year at an advertising cost of less than one cent per cup.

A famous soup canner's advertising expense runs into enormous figures. But before he started to advertise his sales cost was twenty percent. Today it is five percent. A cent's worth of advertising sells him six cents of soup.

Advertising pays both buyer and seller—the buyer in smaller costs, the seller in increased production.
